Sachem 2014

Dear Readers,

There are so many people without whom this yearbook would not have been possible. It has been a true collaborative effort, with everyone involved working to create a book that we can all be proud of. This book is a product of our final year of high school, an accumulation of the highlights and the valuable memories leading up to our entry into adulthood. Our goal has always been to capture the moments from this unique time in our lives so that we can look back on them for years to come.

First and foremost, I would like to thank our advisors, Mr. Falcon and Mrs. Cappiello, for all they have done. They have gone above and beyond in their assistance in creating this book, spending hours upon hours working with us. Their dedication to meeting deadlines, offering input, and keeping stress levels under control has been an integral part of the completion of the book. I was so honored to work with them, and cannot thank them enough.

I would like to extend my gratitude to all of the businesses who purchased ads. Your support is what gives us the opportunity and the resources to create this yearbook in the first place.

Thank you to Mrs. Darcy and Mrs. Schiller who have always been there to lend a hand, from offering snacks to helping us sell ads. Their no-nonsense approach has been a valuable asset in meeting deadlines and making tough decisions.

Last, but certainly not least. I am eternally grateful to the other editors with whom I was lucky enough to work this past year. They have shown intense dedication, and have always been willing to go above and beyond what has been expected of them. I do not know what I would have done without their creativity and enthusiasm for the job. I could not have asked for a better team, and am truly indebted to them for always having my back. They have managed to turn an incredibly daunting task into an enjoyable experience, and I cannot thank them enough. To Margaret Johnson, Nicole Nunez, Alyssa Silengo, Morgan Dietter, and Marie Facin: this yearbook would not have been possible without all of your hard work.

As a senior, it has been a great pleasure to work with everyone on the yearbook committee. I would like to wish next year's staff the best of luck and extend my congratulations to the entire class of 2014!

Thank you again to everyone involved,

Brynne MacDonnell
